

Countdown to Christmas IX

#It's just four days till Christmas... I hope my true love gives to me...

Our family's movie highlights#

I see a lot of home movies and while they are all different and unique to each family, there are always similarities. One that I've noticed is that on just about every videotape or reel of film that I transfer, there's always a moment that stands out. That one section where fortune smiled down on the cameraman who happened to be at the right time and the right place with the camera running and caught the video equivalent of lightning in a bottle.

It might have been a poignant moment, or a turning point in someone's life; an incident that became the family's running joke, or simply a tradition within the family that was repeated every year. Whatever it is, on every tape there's usually one segment that people tend to remember and really enjoy.

The beauty of digitalizing one's memories is that it becomes so easy to isolate all those moments from your collection of tapes and "splice" them together to form a special highlight reel – without affecting the original footage that will remain intact.

There are few limitations in the world of digital video editing. If you can imagine what you want to end up with, more than likely we can make that happen. And what better gift can be had than to present your family with all their favorite moments gathered together and packaged in an easy to view format?
