

It's Too Darn Hot

Summers in Florida have always been unbearable to the uninitiated. Whenever some visitor comes into the studio and makes the statement that he/she is thinking of moving here, I always tell them not to make a final decision until they come back and spend a little time here in August. That's the unofficial state residence test... If you can make it through August, Florida is a fine place to live.

But the weather can admittedly be hard to handle which is why I am glad that I have an excuse to leave the state during the summer every year, even if just for a week. The Home Video Studio corporation holds its annual getaway for all the studios operating under their brand in July and August... which are the two hottest and most uncomfortable months of the year here in Florida. So it is often a relief to get away from the Sunshine State for a brief respite during this time. This year our destination is... Tucson Arizona.

I checked the forecast today. 117 degrees. D'oh!

Good thing it's a dry heat. If there were any humidity we'd get a third degree burn just walking through the steam in the atmosphere.

In any case, it is sure to be a grand time (spent primarily indoors in the manufactured cool air of the hotel). This post is intended simply to inform that our studio will be closed for a week while we attend our getaway. We'll try to post any items of interest that may come to our attention during our week away. Until then, delight yourself with this blast from the past: Ann Miller singing and dancing to It's Too Darn Hot from Kiss Me Kate.
